Editorial

We do not like to think of graduation as either an ending or a beginning. We like to think of it as a stepping-stone, from which we will go on to other things.

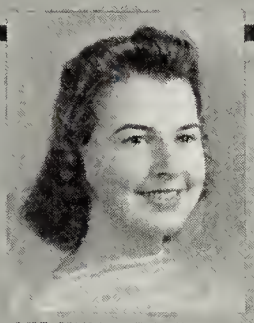

We do not intend to spend our lives chasing endless dreams. We intend to see ourselves as we are, for better or for worse, and make the best of any given situation.

We want to face the world squarely, and we are now facing our first test. We expect to give a lot and take a lot. We want to live lives that will some day enable us to say, "Well done!" We want to live so that neither thoughts of the future nor memories of the past will cause us to flinch.

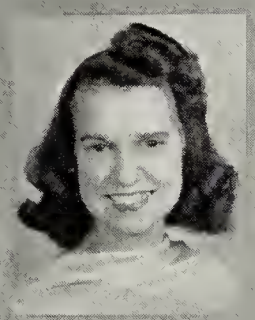

We have learned the value of friendship, and we want to carry that knowledge on with us to make the world a friendlier, better place to live in. People constitute this world, and we want to live the right way with them.

As one friend to another, we, the graduating class of 1940, greet the world with a hearty hand-clasp.

Class Poem

MY GRIEVANCE

Our high school days are at a peak,
The time has come for us to part.
Before I go I'd like to speak
A grievance deep within my heart.
Do you recall our freshman year—
The confusion in finding our classes?
When sophomores that, shrinking, fear
Of being shoved around by the masses?
As Juniors, the banquet you'll recall.
We certainly had a lot of fun!
Now we're Seniors, the best year of all—
The chosen leaders, this challenged by none.
Now here's my grievance, be it chance or fate?
When we start to enjoy it, we graduate!

— Patricia Burke

CLASS HISTORY

Freshman

HIGH SCHOOL at last! We were called "rats" and saw many trying times, but all of us had to go through that stage to reach our goal—graduation. Our teachers, Miss Brittle, Miss Gilliam, Miss Sinclair, and Miss Wenger, helped us to get adjusted to our new way of school life, and we began to take an interest in the school activities.

After examinations we found ourselves Sophomores.

Sophomore

We entered our Sophomore year with the satisfaction that we could look upon the incoming Freshman as we were at one time looked upon. We took a more active interest in school activities and many joined the various clubs.

Our teachers Mr. Thompson, Mrs. Thompson, Miss Robertson, and Miss Chambliss helped us to work hard and pass our examinations.

We had at last reached the half-way mark of our goal and became Juniors.

Junior

This year we felt really important. We were Juniors and took part in the Junior-Senior Banquet. We took a more active interest in school sports and activities.

Our football team won high recognition by whipping Petersburg 13-7.

Our teachers were Mr. Beckwith, Miss Brittle, and Miss Haley.

We passed our examinations and met the requirements to become Seniors.

Senior

Seniors at last! After three long years of hard work, we were at last called "Dignified Seniors" and looked upon as leaders of the school. There was the excitement about the rings, pictures, cards, announcements, and Kaleidoscopes.

We were very proud to have two of our graduating seniors make the Central League basketball team.

We had charge of the school news in the Hopewell News and had the annual minstrel.

With our teachers Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Smith, Mr. Glass, Miss Bell, and Mr. Woehr, we worked hard to make our last year a success. We worked hard to make our Kaleidoscope a success and looked forward with much anticipation to our Banquet, Class Day, and Graduation.

The Senior Class wishes to express their deep appreciation to Mr. Mallonee and the faculty for their untiring efforts in helping us reach our goal—graduation.

It is with many fond memories and deep regrets that we say "good-bye to Hopewell High School."

CLASS HISTORIAN--JEWEL CONNELLY.

Introduction to

LITERARY DEPARTMENT

THIS YEAR the Literary Department of the Hopewell High School Kaleidoscope observes its fifth successful year. In 1936 it was begun as an essential department to help develop literary talent of the pupils. Not only does it give the pupils a chance to express their literary ability, but it also stimulates interest in this work in the school. It is considered an honor for them to have their work published in the annual.

Each year the material turned in is better than the preceding years. But this year, we feel, surpasses all others in the original and excellent essays, short stories, and poems turned in. We'd like to thank the Junior and Senior English classes for their wholehearted cooperation.

With the help and further guidance of its capable leader, Mr. Sutherland, we feel sure that this Literary Department will go far in the future in aiding those talented pupils of this school to realize their literary ability.

ELIZABETH TENNENT.

Verse

A STREETLIGHT
By June Copeland

I'm a streetlight in Factory Town
Mids't its lights and its ceaseless roaring;
On all kinds of things my light shines down,
Stark and cruel, but never boring.

Shriveled up, frightened children,
Created by the slums;
Policemen fat and sloppy,
Driving on the bums.

Dreamers blissful in their dreams
Tho' cold and hungry be;
Shrewd, calculating lawyers,
Counting up their fee.

Aching, weary, shopworn girls,
Trudging home, saving fare;
Coarse and pig-eyed foreigners
With black and greasy hair.

Wanton, painted women
With scented, grasping hands;
Shivering, straggling puppies
Eating from garbage cans.

Watery-eyed, leering drunkards
Staggering to no place;
Fine and haughty ladies
With high and frigid grace.

Slobbering babes in Mother's arms
Sucking slippery fingers,
Ambitious lassies from small towns,
Hopeful artists, actors, singers.

Boys and girls in love with love,
Carefree, happy, gay;
Whistling, red-lipped newsboys,
Up since break of day.

I'm a streetlight in Factory Town
Mids't its lights and its ceasless roaring;
On all kinds of things my light shines down,
Stark and cruel, but never boring.

DUAL TRIOLETS

MY HERO

He was tall and dark;
He was somewhat handsome.
He sang like a lark;
He was tall and dark.
He could sit in the park;
He was never lonesome.
He was tall and dark;
He was somewhat handsome.

Helen Kean
English (8-1)

I have seen him before;
I don't know just where.
As he passed by the door,
I have seen him before;
I think he's a bore,
With his crop of red hair.
I have seen him before,
But I don't know just where.

Betsy Trigg
English (8-1)

WAR

Anne Panagakos

The bards of old sang of war and glory,
Of heroes who oft died in vain;
But the glory of war is only part of the story,
The rest is bloodshed and pain.

A REQUEST

Paul Doulis

If only I were born in days of old,
To live in days when things were being done
And not in days when they've already come,
Then I could be with men proud, haughty, bold
Indeed, this is my hope, my wish, my love;
If God would only grant me thee,
How happy and carefree I would be.
This can be granted by Him above.
But why should I in my despair
Long for a love that can't be there.
It is probable that our posterity
Will utter a like prayer to the diety.
It is my duty some evils to erase
And make this world a safer place.

WORDS

Virginia Hawley

Words are like blades
That cut raw and deep.
Words are like jades
That are a treasure to keep.

Short Stories

War Zone

Eugene Hobson

"ISN'T THAT the ship we're going on?" asked Charley.

"Yes," said Harry, "that's it."

The two hurried up the wharf and into the ship just as the lines were being cast off.

After an inspection of the ship Harry said, "Ya' know, Charley, I wish we hada' gotten on the South American fruit boat. It would'a been a warmer trip, an' they get better feed on that one too."

"Well," sad Charley, "it's too late now."

True, there was an ever widening gap between the ship and the shore.

The ship, The "Moint Templor," plowed her way toward the open sea. She was an old freighter of about 5,000 gross tons and about 350 feet long. The ship was owned by the Globe Steamship Company Limited of London.

Harry and Charley met a couple of old salts who told them they were to stay in the foc'sle.

They didn't like the ship they had chosen because it was always dark at night and they were heading for the war zone.

Every night while below, they could hear the steady throb of the propellors through the plating.

One evening about dark they heard a new and different type of noise. It was a quick pulsating noise.

"Submarine on our port bow," sang out the lookout.

Instantly the old ship took on new life.

"All hands on deck," rang through the ship.

Abandonship orders quickly followed.

Harry and Charley raced on deck, and headed for the nearest life boat.

Just then a terrific explosion caused the ship to lurch violently. Torpedo E 2.

Harry and Charley were caught off balance and thrown overboard. They called as loudly as possible, but no one seemed to notice.

"Well, Charley," said Harry, "I guess this is goodbye."

What a scene. Two Rats drowning like RATS and an old ship slowly sinking in the moonlight.

The Orchard Lost

Virginia Kennedy

IT WAS only by chance that I discovered it. Tired and care-worn of the ways of men and the business-world, I fled the city to the village. Here I took to lonely walks and solitary ramblings. I became subject to deep, dark moods and often was lost in thought. I tramped about in meditation, scarcely knowing or caring whence I went. My unknowing steps merely followed the lonely wooded road, and the lost orchard embraced me before I awakened to its existence. It was a lost orchard. Forgotten, unloved, uncared for, it had grown riotously, willfully, fiercely. Withdrawn in seclusion among the hills, it seemed a challenge, a challenge to other lost souls. I was only a part of it. The silent sunset sent shafts of silver light through the boughs of the trees, playing lightly upon rock here, struggling to fathom some tangled undergrowth there.

"Even an orchard has moods," I thought.

I became part of the orchard. It was my retreat. In the Spring I had come, and through the Spring I watched—watched it stir and unveil itself—watched it awaken and disentangle itself.

It was June before I became aware of that other presence—before I knew some other had stumbled upon my retreat. Filled with resentment, I hastened over to rid myself of this interloper. She met me. A girl it was, with anger in her dark eyes and scorn on her lips.

Trespasser, invader, transgressor—all these she called me, with the hurt and disappointment of my presence ringing in her voice. Then I knew—knew that the orchard was her haven, and that she, too, loved its atmosphere of beauty and seclusion.

With the mist of the orchard hanging over to soften my spirits, and under the influence of the pale sky and rustling leaves, I drew nearer and told her. I took her hand and said,

"Come, we will share the orchard together."

June passed on into Summer and through it all we watched the orchard ripen and grow, and I became conscious of the ripening and growing of my heart, and I wondered about another. It was with reluctance that I took my leave at summer's end, with vows and promises that I would return with Spring.

Winter passed and still I dreamed away. Visions there in the orchard that was lost dimmed my eyes. I dared not ask, was it the orchard, or the girl, or both? I wondered if I should return with Spring, wondered if I should see the orchard or not. I felt that it would be changed. I felt that men and life would have found their way ere now and changed my orchard. My very soul protested. Better not blot your memories, remember the orchard as it was, nothing can change that, close the book.

Still my lagging steps carried me on till I could summon courage to look upon the orchard which I called mine. The road led on, where leaves had fallen with a rustling like the fear that stirred my heart.

I was glad I was steeled against the awakening, glad I was prepared for the shock. Even before I saw the shining new mail-box, before I saw the furrows of earth upturned, before I saw smoke circling from a chimney across the way, before I heard the shouts of men, I knew what I had felt all the way out. My lost orchard was indeed lost, lost to men interested only in the bread of life. My heart cried out to the orchard, and the wind rushed through the branches and tossed them high and seemed to fling back the answer. With a bitter smile I turned my back upon it all.

Instinctively, I knew the girl, too, was lost. I wanted her not, now. She belonged to the orchard that was. They were but part of the past. So I had seen the orchard lost and to what use? I had but lost the orchard and all it stood for forever. I thought of the price of Fate that overtakes men. I was but paying that price.

Essay

Leisure Time

Jean Woody

TO THOSE of us whose few hours of leisure must be carefully spent to make the most of them, one especially delightful way of doing so comes to my mind. That is the enjoyment of really great music via radio. There are the symphony orchestra broadcasts and the Saturday afternoon Metropolitan opera broadcasts of which the latter seems most appropriate, coming as it does on one of our free afternoons. Through the skillful descriptions of the announcer we are able to picture the entire performance from the first dramatic sweep of the great gold curtains to the last burst of applause from the enthusiastic audience. The stories are carefully outlined and the costumes elaborately described until the picture of the opera assumes shape in our minds.

And so, in the comfort and quiet of our living room, the stories of Tristan and Isodele, Lohengrin and other popular works unfold before us.

For those of us who are familiar with these great musical dramas, it is as if an old and beloved friend comes to our home. To the younger listeners it is a world of enchantment opened up. Next to actual attendance at these performances nothing could be more delightful and, at the same time more designed to develop our appreciation of music and drama, than the radio performances of truly serious music.

But this is one of the effortless kinds of enjoyment of leisure. Balanced living should include sports of which tennis, swimming, and such games as are available to the home should be enjoyed. These promote good sportsmanship and good health. Any home where simple sports are made available will soon become a center of social life and happy friendships and healthful exercise will result.

And reading must not be neglected. Modern fiction, some stories of great men, and the great old classics should all be explored, for in these lies a reservoir of memories that will stay with us for many happy years.

In this busy rustling life, we should realize that only in our leisure hours can we hope to recapture a small part of the art of pleasant living, and every opportunity to increase our enjoyment of that part of our day should be grasped and enjoyed to the fullest.

C. meeting, Chamber of Commerce Banquet, Woman's Club Christmas Program, and the English teachers section of the Virginia Education Association meeting in Richmond. On Christmas Day they sang carols on the Municipal Building steps and gave a thirty minute transcribed broadcast over radio station W. R. N. L.

As the special Spring musical event this year the choir, on Good Friday, sang "The Crucifixion" by John Stainer in the High School auditorium with Stanley Franck, baritone, and Joseph Whittemore, tenor, as guest soloists.

This year the choir entered the State Festival and received a rating of Excellent.

The number of members was raised from 34 to 50 and extra robes secured.

Football

September first! Hopewell High again traveled to Buckroe Beach for their week of conditioning, under the watchful eye of Coach Leslie Parson and his two able assistant Coaches—Glass and Upson.

Minus the services of men like Phelps, Maneri and King, Coach Parson had a hard job ahead of him but with eleven lettermen returning along with capable reserves in, D. Pritchard, Slovic, D. Oliver, work was begun.

With three weeks of intensive practice, Hopewell started slowly, defeating Victoria 29 to 0. The following week the Blue Devils lost to Roanoke 12 to 0 on a rain soaked field.

Hopewell came back the week after to turn back the heavier, Woodrow Wilson, team 14 to 7. The week-end after, the Devils stopped Thomas Jefferson 7 to 0.

Next came the never to be forgotten Petersburg game. The Crimson Wave led 6 to 0 at the half. Opening the second half, the Blue Devils took the opening kick-off 94 yards for a touchdown. Conventing the extra point, the Blue Devils fought savagely only to see their slim lead snatched away in the closing minutes of the game on a safety. The game ending 8 to 7, Petersburg.

Out-classed in the first half at Hampton, the Devils came back to take a hard fought 19 to 14 victory. Continuing their winning streak the Blue Devils upset the highly favored John Marshall elevens 21 to 6.

Hopewell easily turned back Suffolk and Alexandria in the next two games. The week following this a scrappy Lane team earned a 6 to 6 tie with Hopewell.

The 1939 combination is considered the finest all around eleven Hopewell has had to represent them in class A competition.

E. Phelps received honorable mention on the all-state team. Elmo Parr was placed on the second team and Albert Nemetz on the third.

Elmo Parr was also honored on the all Southern selection.

The 1940 team will be without the services of lettermen: R. Clark, F. McLean, Elmo Parr, E. Phelps, H. Fayed, and B. Oliver.

Minus these men, the outlook next year is very dim.

Coach Leslie Parson called for all pitchers and catchers on March 4. Ray Keenan, ace of Devil hurling staff and Knox Morris and Jeff. Brogdon, all lettermen from last year's championship team, were on hand. Raymond Clark, letterman and converted infielder, is slated to hold down the receiving assignment.

The infielders and outfielders reported two weeks later with practically the same team back in: C . Hughes, 1st.; C. McLean, 2nd.; J. Mathis, S. S.; E. Parr, C. F.; J Holman L. F.

The team lost a close game to St. Christopher 8 to 7, but came back to whip Chester 14 to 0.

Next year the team will lose: R. Clark, R. Keenan, K. Morris, C. Hughes, F. McLean, J. Mathis, and E. Parr.

Under the guiding hand of Coach Upson, the Blue Devils' thin clads have been working out for some weeks. Coach Upson has the makings of a good squad this year with lettermen returning: Elmo Parr, dash man; Raymond Clark, dash man; Charles Hughes, field events; Dick Oliver, hurdles.

The Blue Devils downed Chester 70 to 47 early in the season, showing good form.

The Devils will be without the services of the following: E. Parr, R. Clark, C. Hughes, R. Turner.

Girls' Softball Team

A record of nine wins and one lose was the remarkable record made by the Blue Devilettes softball team in their first year of organization.

Until the closing game with Disputanta High School, Coach Polly Daniel's girls were undefeated, having won nine consecutive games and scoring one hundred and forty-two runs against seventy-two for the opposition.

The girls were awarded letters for softball for the first time. Those to receive them were Evelyn Griggs, Margaret Jackson, Rosa Lee Shanko, Dora Seitz, Virginia Hawley, Legare Thompson, Evelyn Atkins, Delma George, Cordelia Robbins, Betty Phelps, and the manager, Helen Hawley.

The reserves were Phyllis Clark, Mary Eggebrecht, Elizabeth Jennings, Mary Duck, Ruth Hand, Alma Burnham, Lucille Ashby, and Lily Cheely. Edna Love was assistant manager.

This spring sixty-five girls are trying for positions on the team. Prospects are bright for the nineteen-forty team.

The record of last year's team is as follows:

Tennis

The Blue Devil netmen under the experienced eye of Coach Charles Smith developed into the finest team ever to represent Hopewell in tournament play.

Matched against strong teams like: Petersburg, John Marshall Thomas Jefferson, Portsmouth, Hopewell won the Central District Championship downing Petersburg in a close play-off match.

This enabled Hopewell to enter the state meet at Charlottesville where they topped Lynchburg in the semi-finals only to lose to Portsmouth in the finals.

The number one double team composed of Harold King and Burt Short remained undefeated through the State meet.

The Devils will lose the following lettermen: Harold King, Hugh Birchett, Burt Short, Jesse Strickland.

Archery Club

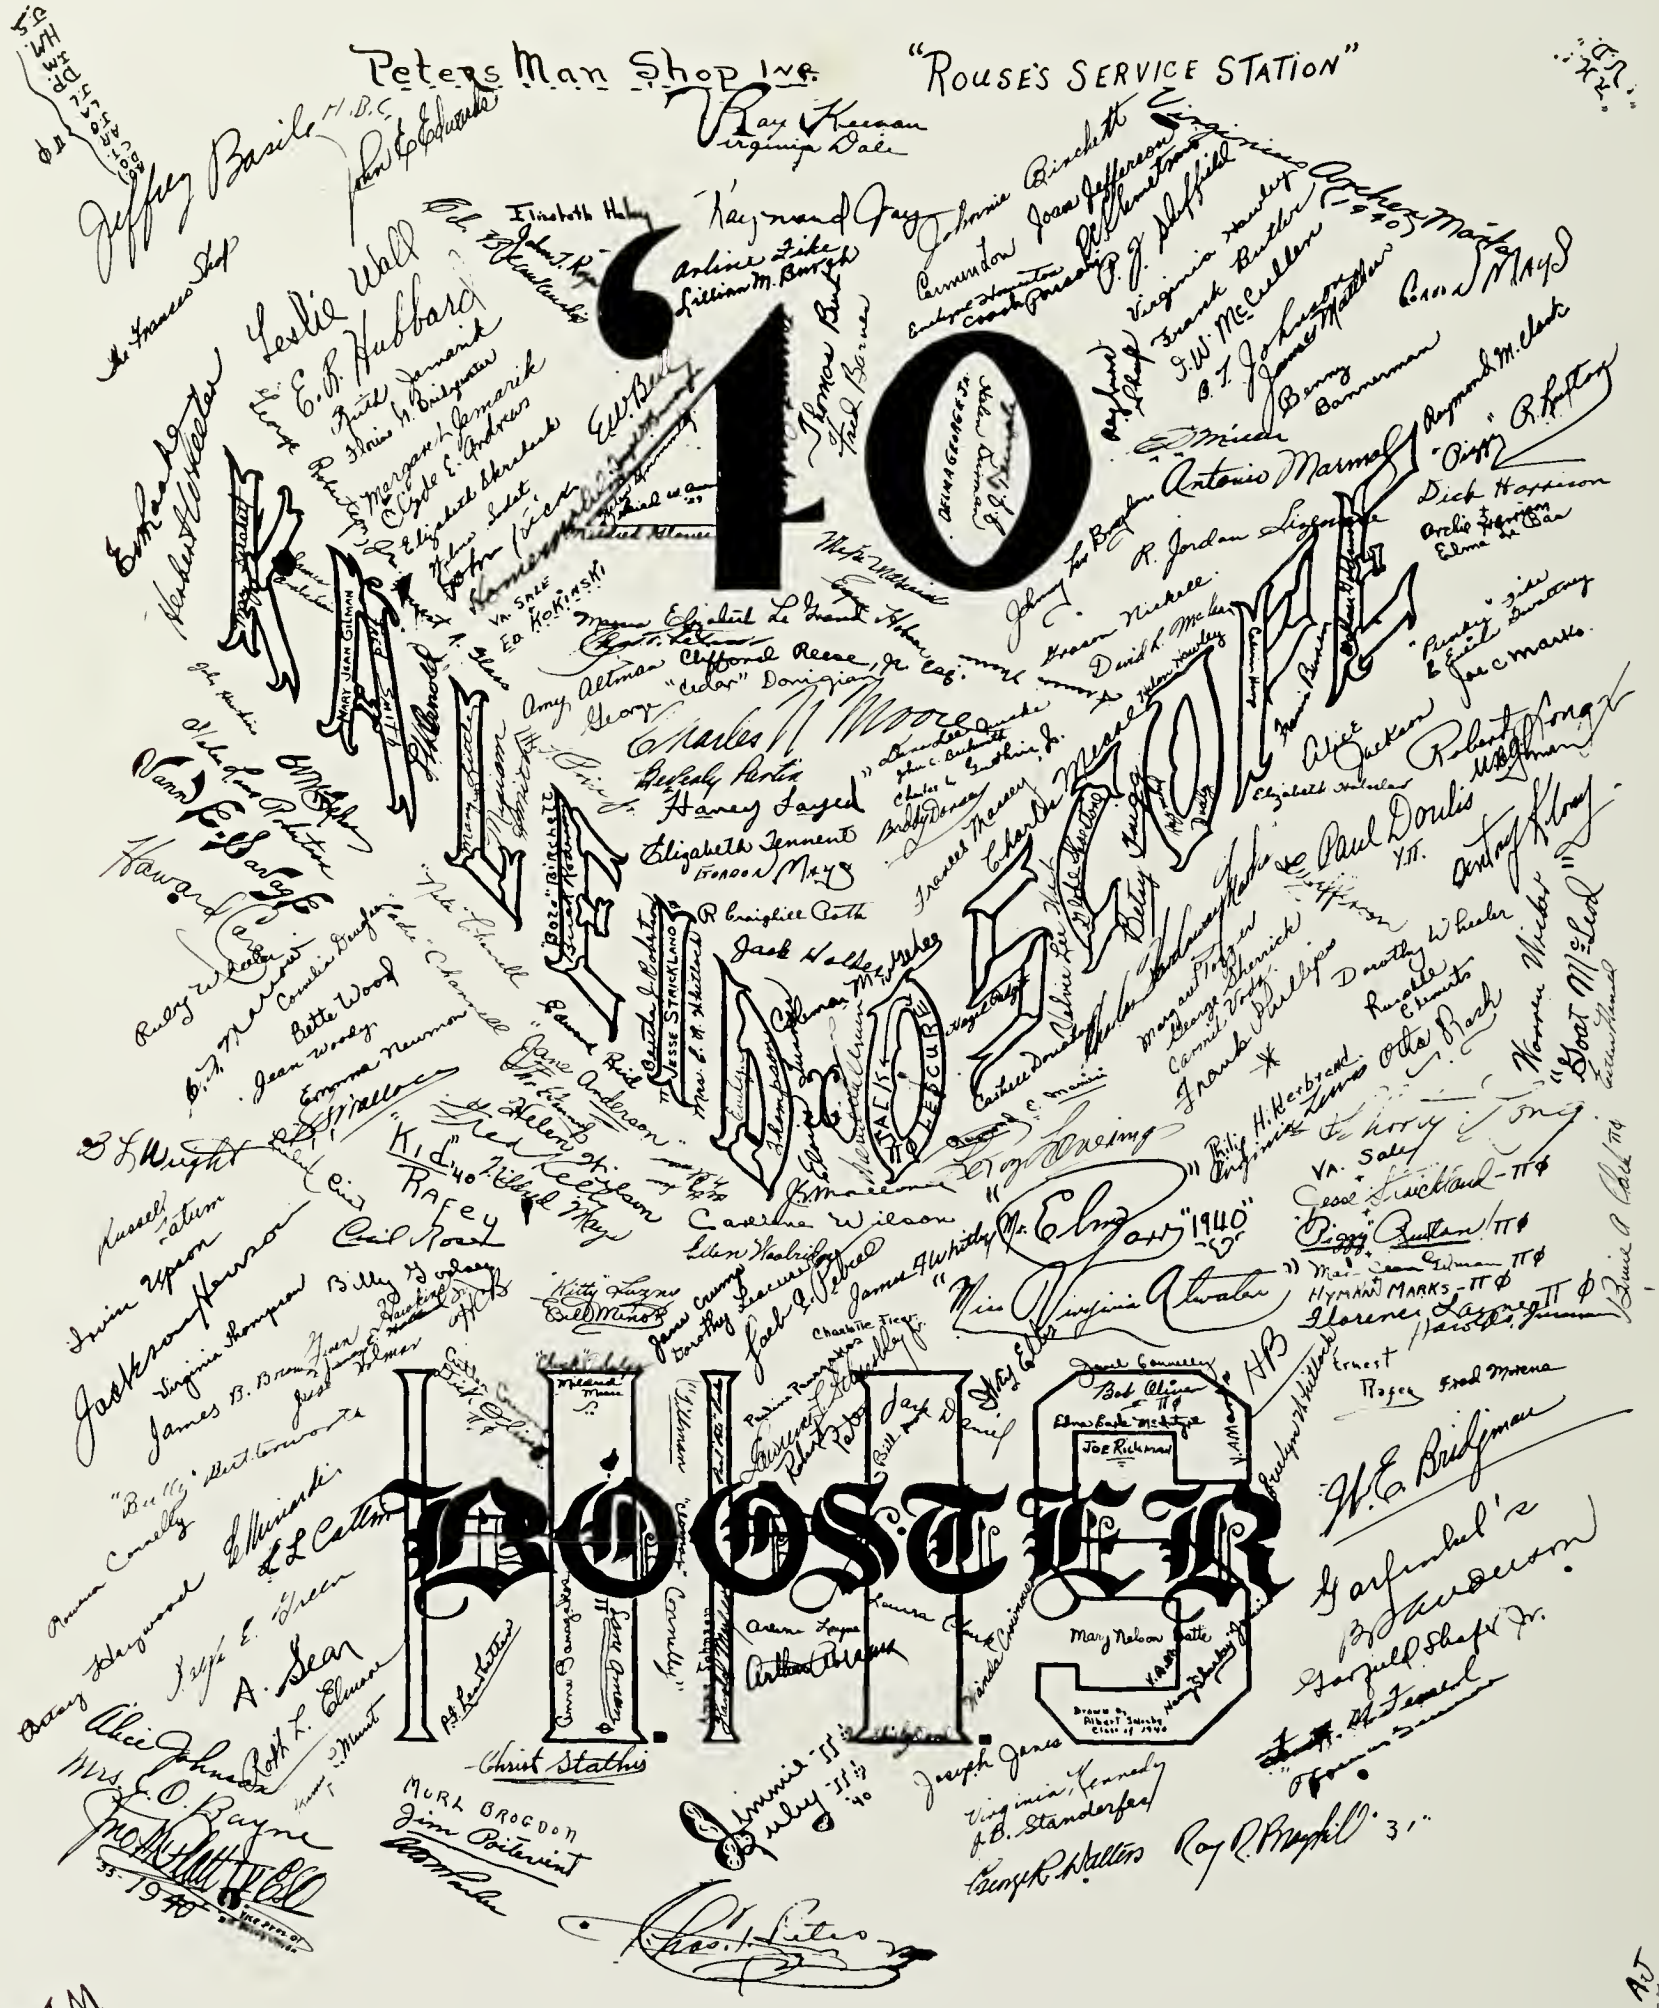

Eight girls answered Miss Polly Daniel's call to organize an Archery Club. Phyllis Clark was elected manager of this group, and she and Miss Daniels are making plans to contact other schools to arrange one or two matches.

The girls will practice one hour every Wednesday, forty-five minutes being spent for target practice, fifteen minutes in competitive matches. At the end of the season the two girls who have the highest scores will receive a metal or some other reward.

The members of the team are as follows:

Phyllis Clark
Cordelia Robbins
Jean Woody
Mildred Mease
Pat Hanson
Betty Sue Altman
Mary Douglas Hayes
Kitty Ford
